A CLASSROOM IN THE FOREST*

- I 1 In most countries, children spend their school day inside a building. They sit at desks in a classroom for five or six hours every day. Some children go outside only for a short break. However, there is a special school in Denmark where the children learn outside every day. This school has its classroom in a forest.
- II 5 In the forest, there are wooden tables, benches and a big tent. The children do math, read and write at the tables. When it rains, they can sit in the tent, or they can put on raincoats and stay under the trees. So bad weather does not stop their lessons.
- III Many parents help at the school, too. "Every Friday afternoon, I come to the forest and plant trees with the children," says Lena Holm, whose daughter Maya studies at the school. "The 10 children are very proud of their trees."
- IV Parents and teachers say that the forest school is good for children. The children are sick less often because they move a lot in the fresh air. Also, they learn many things about nature. "When Maya went to her old school, she was often sick," says Lena. "Now she is outside all day, and she is almost never sick. And she knows the names of twenty birds!"

BEN GOES TO A KITE FESTIVAL

- I 1 Every January, a big kite festival takes place on a wide field in the north of India. Last year, 2,000 people from many different countries traveled there with their kites. For most of them, it was their first visit to India. A prize of 500 dollars goes to the most beautiful kite.
- II 5 Ben Carter came to the festival all the way from Ireland. At home, he works as a bus driver. For six months before the trip, Ben spent every evening on his kite. It was a big red fish. Sadly, on the first day of the festival, a strong wind broke it, so Ben had no chance to win the prize. Still, he is not giving up. "Next year I am going back," he says, "and my new kite will be much stronger."
- III 10 Back in his town in Ireland, Ben started a kite club. It is open to anyone in the town who wants to make a kite. Every week, Ben brings paper, sticks and string to the club. "Most of the time, people build their kites on their own," he explains. "I help only when someone has a problem. And on windy days, we all go out and fly our kites together."
